

Pied Wagtail (Motacilla alba yarrellii)

Status: Common breeder

Current trend: An almost ubiquitous bird in Ayrshire, Pied Wagtails can be found breeding in virtually every habitat from mountain top to coastal cliffs. Very little information is available on breeding performance, however, but the species appears to be doing well, with no indication of a drop in numbers.

Follow up: More records of breeding pairs and their success rates would help us better understand how well this bird is faring.
