

Skylark (Alauda arvensis)

Status: Common breeder.

Current trend: Skylarks continue to do well in many parts of Ayrshire, with healthy populations noted in locations containing extensive areas of rough grass, ranging from the rough on golf-courses to upland moorland. However, very little information exists on breeding success, and the assumption that the population is stable is based on numbers returning to breeding locations.

Follow up: More information would be welcome on breeding results.