

Robin (Erithacus rubecula)

Status: Common breeder

Current trend: A very familiar sight to most of us, and present throughout most of the county, the Robin has increased its presence by moving into upland forestry blocks. A brilliant opportunist, it has proved its ability to exist in urban environments as well as remote rural ones. There are few tetrads which do not hold a pair of Robins.

Follow up: More breeding data would be useful to see how well the bird does in different habitats.
